Community-Based Care Capacity Building (project #23RSBEX01)

The Community Based Care Capacity Building project is expanding the number of beds in residential facilities for groups (or RFGs, commonly known as assisted living facilities) that serve frail elderly individuals or individuals with physical disabilities and are covered by Medicaid. The goal of this project was to reduce unnecessary institutionalization by increasing residential settings options, a need highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic. Eleven homes received funding for construction, equipment, licensure, or other modifications to increase the number of available beds. Two homes completed construction in March 2025, and homes in Fernley, Las Vegas and Reno are currently undergoing expansion.

Analyn Lua Diaz, the owner and director of operations at Green Valley Memory Care in Henderson, said the facility was able to expand from 8 to 10 beds, add one staff member, and purchase new power lift recliners to help the residents stand up and a commercial freezer to store more food. Green Valley also now has five frail elderly or physically disabled residents, expanding Nevada's capacity to care for its most vulnerable citizens.
